

“An immense mass of clotted nonsense.”

– Teachers’ World

“A bleared panorama of deaths and sighs and blood and tears and fire and general gloom and watery ghastliness.”

– The Saturday Review

Think yourself lucky that those comments refer to two other books*. This one, which you clasp to your bosom while weeping tears of unparalleled joy, is a fat compendium of tales from Frank Key’s radio programme Hooting Yard On The Air. Armed with this book, you can prance along pathways and into the deep dark woods, declaiming the stories aloud, frightening puppies and infants, as if you were Mr Key himself!

Ulysses* by James Joyce and Infelicia by Adah Isaacs Menken.

A Hooting Yard Book
in association with Resonance FM

Impugned by a Peasant and Other Stories 🐣 Frank Key

Impugned by a Peasant and other stories

Frank Key

